Why?

The homeless population has made it dirty, more unsafe, and unwelcoming.	1
Recently running on the east end -- near the Longhorn bridge -- there have been so many 'camps' and occasionally scary people near the trail..... I have not felt safe there.	1
People of all shapes and sizes.	1
people of all shapes and sizes	1
People of all ages and races use the trails. You see families, groups of friends, couples and individuals using the trail at any time.	1
People always seem like they are in a good mood when they are on the trail and I enjoy the serenity and beauty of nature. The reason I answered sometimes rather than all the time is because campers and people who seem to be out of touch with reality (in a bad way and sometimes menacing way) increasingly are camping along the trail. Some of these campers keep their sites neat and clean, but some of them seem to collect what, at least to me, is junk.	1
Other than the homeless camp area just east of Pleasant Valley, the park is clean and friendly.	1
Nothing bad ever happened	1
Most persons on the trail are so friendly. I have made a few friends. The trail is so peaceful. COVID or no COVID, the ducks, birds, rabbits, turtles, etc are always there. The trail helped me survive COVID	1
Many of the people on the part of the trail I use (western portion north and south) "look like me." Also, it's clean. There's little loitering--most everyone is walking, running, biking, moving on to somewhere. The Pfluger bridge is the exception, but it's always a delightful break from the rest of my route, with musicians, sight-see-ers, lots of loitering.	1
Love running and walking and biking the trail	1
Lots of people, jogging, walking, biking enjoying being there, near the water.	1
Local Austinite- so I've always felt at home on the trail.	1
Let's be honest. There are reports of people being accosted and raped down around the lake. Then there are the homeless. I do not feel comfortable there anymore by myself. I will go with others.	1
I've been an avid user of the trail for 30+ years. I can only recount a handful of times when I felt unsafe which was while running at night. Of these times, most were the fear of twisting an ankle.	1
it's open to the public	1

It's not comfortable at night - it's far too dark. It being surfaced with gravel also means it regularly erodes and must be repaired. The gravel surface is also hard on thin bike tires, wheelchair tires, and more.	1
It's a lot more crowded than it used to be so I feel less comfortable during the pandemic because it's hard to maintain social distancing, so I don't go there as much and I don't take my family anymore. I used to feel welcome and comfortable.	1
It's lovely and the people are nice, usually.	1
It is open all all times, is safe and is central to the community and my workplace	1
It is not easily accessible to people who are not in the central Austin area. Why don't we get parks and related facilities in the unfashionable outlying areas within the city?	1
It is mostly open, with few dark or enclosed spots, making it feel mostly safe. Also, most people are kind and courteous on the trail, including keeping an appropriate social distance.	1
It is a wonderful part of our community that I have loved for many years	1
It is a central urban park with lots of shade and space	1
It is a beautiful natural area that allows escape from the artificial environment of a big city. It is an oasis allowing a return to nature free from distractions. The most revolting single factor making me feel unwelcome is the accumulation of dog feces abandoned by irresponsible dog owners, The second most unwelcoming factor is too-fast cyclists riding too close to walkers.	1
It feels safe and is well maintained	1
Is connection with nature, stress relief, connecting with others	1
I'm quite comfortable riding around anywhere in ATX. Parts of the trail will need to be widened and of course there needs to be continual maintenance.	1
I usually see someone that I know there. I've been using the trail/lake/park regularly since 1967. It feels like home.	1
I used to feel comfortable there all of the time, but I feel less comfortable now that so many people use the trail. East of IH-35 used to be quieter and now it's full of things like the rowing competition and people biking and walking. It used to be more like a place to retreat to and now it's a place to gather. I'm also more concerned about safety with people camping around the trail. I feel safer with the broader Pleasant Valley biking/sidewalk though and think that's a great improvement.	1
I run there almost every week and love it.	1

I love the energy and vibe of the walkers, joggers, dogs and bikers of all ages in a beautiful place by the water.	1
I love spending time outdoors and the trail has so many places to sit and enjoy our city's abundance of plants, wildlife and fresh air. I also enjoy biking and love that I can use the trail as a way to avoid busy city streets	1
I have never had a problem on the trail. Now that Austin is so big, there are almost always other people on the trail at all hours of the day.	1
I have had positive experiences enjoying nature while walking and it feels comfortable to me.	1
I have been going there for a very long time. I know the routes. I enjoy seeing people out being active and enjoying the outdoors.	1
I have been coming to the trail for a long time and am familiar with using it.	1
I grew up in and around the lakes of central Texas - the smells and feels around the trail feel like home	1
I feel comfortable enjoying nature while being out on the trail walking.	1
I don't feel comfortable by myself at night - this isn't true for only the trail, but many wooded, dimly lit urban spots. I don't know many women that feel comfortably by themselves in those settings.	1
I always go during the day or when there happens to be other people. Not sure how my experience would be outside of that, but I suspect I would feel less comfortable at night.	1
homeless problems. horrible. also bikers that are too fast and zipping thru walkers/joggers	1
Generally I feel safe, but occasionally there are moments that can feel uncomfortable when it is not very busy.	1
Full of homeless people	1
Being closer to Nature, other people & the environment	1
Bikes zooming by at unsafe speeds are dangerous for dogs and children. We need more splits in dangerously narrow areas. Trail is dangerous at night, we need non-obtrusive, dark sky approved lighting along the entire trail for safety.	1
Because I'm a moderately wealthy person and don't look like a person of color. As Austin grows, people of color and poor people of color very likely don't feel welcome. And surveys like this don't get taken by that population. The changes to Town Lake are nice, but they come at a cost - quite literally having to pay for parking - and we're losing some of the essence of what makes it special.	1

At times uncomfortable with the camping activity, and too fast motorized vehicles. 1

As you know, parts of the trail have been appropriated by homeless camps. And often, there are people on the trail who are clearly under the influence of either alcohol or drugs. I know that you are not in charge of clearing the trail, but I wish you would allocate part of your fundraising to increasing efforts. The Parks department is woefully underfunded (in part because of the huge allocation to homeless housing). There has to be a creative way to solve this problem. 1

As a male usually with my dog I feel safe. People are friendly and enjoying themselves for the most part. I'm not usually there after dark though. 1

As a biking route, being able to be away from motorists is the ultimate safe biking experience. As a pedestrian/jogger it's also amazing to not have to have my head on swivel looking for motorists who are not looking for me. The trail has enough people on it at most hours of the day that I feel like there are "eyes on it" from a safety perspective. The only un-safe experiences I've had are in regard to trail conditions (loose gravel, washed out areas, large bumps between the paved/unpaved areas, etc. 1

Do you have special memories involving the Trail or the Lake? Please tell us about them.

When I had a newborn in daycare and a child in preK at Metz Elementary I would pick them both up at the end of the workday and go down to the lake. We would lay on a picnic blanket & I have fond memories of nursing my newborn, while big sis held her hand & we all watched the shadows of leaves dancing on the blanket.	1
When I came to interview for my first job in Austin I walked down to the trail (from the non-sidewalked/weird road entrance off of Cesar Chavez) after my interview and sat on a bench on the peninsula area and thought, if I get this job offer this (the trail) is why I'm moving here. What an asset!	1
When Austin was smaller, I would see familiar faces every time I ran. I felt a sense of community. Although that is now rare, I still love seeing people enjoying their time at the trail.	1
Walking, jogging, biking, kayaking, enjoying the beauty of nature with loved ones, old and young.	1
Walking with friends and my dog, discovering the section east of I-35.	1
Training for a half-marathon on the Trail right after I moved to Austin. It was a great way to get to know the city and meet other runners.	1

Tons! Training for marathons, walking with my dogs and husband, paddleboarding, kayaking. Probably my all time favorite specific event involving the lake was when my husband surprised me with a private sunset boat ride for my birthday a few years ago.	1
The trail is a space to enjoy nature and get away from the stress of the day.	1
Sunrise on the Trail is magical.	1
seeing the 100's of floaters on the lake in the summer	1
Sadness that these kinds of amenities are only available to the beautiful people who are lucky enough to live or work in central Austin.	1
Pushing my babies in strollers around the lake...and now 25+ years later, jogging the same trail with fewer responsibilities. Also, taking our canoe onto the lake 30+ years ago, before it was a thing, to watch the 4th of July fireworks show. Best view we ever had!	1
Over the years I've had many great walks at the Trail with friends, and I feel like it's one of the best places to truly connect with others.	1
over 40 years of running with friends on the trail. purchased bricks to honor those runners who have passed	1
No thanks.	1
No	1
My son and his fiancée got engaged on the trail.	1
My first experience with running outside, my mother pushing me in a stroller as a child, training for races, meeting with friends during the pandemic when it wasn't safe to gather anywhere else	1
My daughter got me a commemorative brick on The Trail that says "We Go Together Like PBJ, ❤️ Love You Mom, Xoxo Julie". For years on every hike we take, we pack a pbj sandwich...so the brick has extra special meaning!	1
My dad used to take me to the trail to practice bike riding as a kid. My cross country team in high school would use it on our jogging days. More recently, I use it to bike to Barton Springs in the summer.	1
Many years of jogging the trail loop from MoPac to Lamar & back at least 3 times per week.	1
Lovely runs. Doing community service w my son w TTF. Spamarama many years ago :)	1
Lots of little moments and interesting sights.	1

Long runs, training for the marathon.	1
I've walked the trail daily for almost 10 years. But during the pandemic, it truly felt like a retreat. A place that I could get out of my house and connect to the larger world during a very unsettling time. It saved my sanity on more than one occasion.	1
I've walked all my dogs on the Trails, two of which have passed. I've walked, conversed and kayaked with friends, some of whom have passed. I've walked alone to write songs. It's a familiar anchor, like a natural home, where good memories are made. My biggest concern is noise pollution - I want everyone to be able to hear birds.	1
I've celebrated my birthday with picnics near the trail and lake more than once. I have loved walking the trail since I moved to Austin in 1996. Working downtown, I often will just amble at lunch or after work, and I always see something wondrous. I have enjoyed rowing and biking, and especially treasured my time walking with friends in the first summer of the pandemic, since it was a safe-feeling space where we could come together outside and visit and exercise.	1
I've been running with friends on the Town Lake trail since I moved to Austin 9 years ago. I have lots of fond memories of us running along the trail training for races and chatting about what is going on in everyone's lives.	1
It's my extended backyard.	1
It used to be beautiful and safe....no longer that way	1
It is different every time, each interaction is a memory and special.	1
I used to walk the lake with my dog daily. I loved working out in nature, and felt safe to be there alone during the day. I also had a women walking group; we walked and solved the problems of the world together.	1
I used to go to Austin High and run XC- so I spent a lot of days on the trail. I remember watching a water moccasin swim in the lake and being surprised to see it navigating the water so smoothly. It's one of my favorite places in Austin.	1
i saw Kevin Bacon eating ice cream	1
I remember playing in the McCallum HS band at a tree planting ceremony with Lady Bird in the early 70's. Aquafest and Fourth of July fireworks were at the lake. Every piece of the trail has some memory attached to it. The trail was the last place I saw my closest friend before he died. Special sunrises; sighting of an albino squirrel; graceful swans; stand-up paddleboarding on a lazy summer day. I also fell on the bridge and broke my arm once. I feel like the trail and the lake are integral parts of my life.	1

I liked learning about bats from the information posted on the trail. I would be happy to see more inter active bat exhibits.	1
I have trained for all my marathons on the trail, walked with coworkers and had some of my first strolls with my newborns - now ages 7 & 9. It is a welcoming place for all stages in my life.	1
I have lots of memories - running into Ann Richards years ago and running into Elizabeth Warren in 2019. I've run, walked, biked, kayaked, paddle-boarded, and cleaned up trash.	1
I had a full day of visiting parks within Austin that day and this Trail was the best experience I had that day. Amazing views, great sunshine, and unique bits of art I was able to see.	1
I do not have one special memory but I have enjoyed the trail many times and how to continue to do so.	1
I did much of my training for my first marathon there. I enjoyed taking my son for walks and bike rides there when he was growing up.	1
Have watched friends get married on the trail. Have helped push babies around the lake.	1
For about 30 years, the trail has been a place for me to walk with friends and family and to connect with them and with nature. From walking and talking with college friends, cruising on rental bikes with a boyfriend, walking alone and taking in nature, kayaking with my husband, getting to and from cultural events and concerts, taking a work break, walking meetings with colleagues. Oh, I loved the art project that had a piano on the Congress bridge. The trail has given me a place connect with nature, the people of my city and people I love.	1
biking numerous times, paddle boarding, watching the lake flood during a rainy season	1
After I had my second child I would pickup my baby from daycare and my big kiddo from preK at Metz Elementary and go down to the lake for an after school picnic snack time. It was a wonderful way to relax and reconnect after time apart. I have fond memories of my infant nursing, big kiddo holding little sis's tiny hands and our baby watching the shadows of leaves.	1
Across the years it has provided many memories, from fourth of July events, to movies, kayaking, concerts and love to see the surroundings. Nature is fantastic and it makes it worthwhile going there for it.	1

About 45 years ago, I undertook a get-healthy program that transformed me into a very healthy person. The major component was covering about 25 miles of trail every week. My favorite and most frequently used trail was along the lake. I am convinced that the escape to nature aspect of the trail allowed mental health improvements as well as the physical health improvements from the exercise. I am clear that my intensive use of the trail contributed heavily to my excellent health today as I face retirement. Feeling my mind and body grow during my intensive use of the trail in those early days is a memory that still brings me peace today.

What do you value most about the Trail?

Response	Count
The view	2
water fountains, showers and toilets along a running trail	1
Tranquility of nature, views of the lake, birds, fish, turtles, ecological restoration as a space to connect with friends.	1
The well maintained paths	1
The ten mile route, boardwalks, footbridges, and connecting with the exercise community in AU sitn	1
The shade.	1
The quietness of the Trail.	1
The opportunity for my mind to wander.	1
The natural environment's proximity to the bustle of downtown. It feels like Austin's heartbeat.	1
The natural environment. The parts away from buildings and traffic are the very best.	1

The natural beauty and the fact that it goes on for so long on both sides of the lake and through the urban core.	1
The money that is spent for the people who are able to use it.	1
The length, the different views, and the changes in experience along the trail.	1
The length of the trail allows for different walks/experiences each time.	1
The green spaces, that is meanders through interesting parts of Austin, and that it is not all paved.	1
The granite rock	1
The flora and fauna is among the best to enjoy at the trail. Whether you can see it on the trail or on the water.	1
The fact that it is an urban trail in a busy urban area---open to everyone, easy to access on foot, and close to the water in most places.	1
the crushed granite surface for running; the natural state of the trail; the peacefulness	1
The connectivity it provides, being so central. It connects parkland, swimming holes, businesses, and entertainment districts. I want this in particular to be expanded on - it shouldn't just be for recreation. Many use this trail to get around, and for good reason. The other main thing I value is the green space it provides.	1
The beauty and the nature. The people I meet	1
shade, off street bike riding and commuting, views	1
seeing the community together enjoying nature	1
Safe Place to run without the threat of cars and see others out too.	1
running trail. bricks to honor those who have used and enjoyed the trail	1
Protection of open space, access, connectivity. Proximity to the lake.	1
Places to rest, information about history/leaders in Austin, information about plant and animal species along the trail, the trail as a gathering space (like live music)	1
Open all the time, free to use	1
Nature, water, quiet.	1

Nature and shade	1
Natural environment, communal space	1
Natural beauty, water stops	1
Multiple access points & free parking.	1
Movement, trees, water views, decent amenities, generally friendly people.	1
Maintenance. I bike several times a week on the trail and it is most always in good condition.	1
Location--it's a bridge between my Barton Hills home and downtown. Preservation of a somewhat natural environment in the middle of town, natural beauty, place where I can walk or jog safely in a beautiful environment.	1
I've enjoyed running and cycling with friends. Sometimes when people look 'lost' i stop to help them -- most times they are out of towners, so it's fun to learn about why they are visiting our trail.	1
It's nice to have a great walking path right in the city that still feels like it's in nature.	1
It's many on and off points.	1
It's beautiful	1
it's an amazing and precious resource situated at the heart of our city.	1
It's a place to be active where I can be in a beautiful outdoor setting.	1
It is very long and well maintained, scenic and easy to access	1
It is one of the only regular experiences I have in Austin where I get to experience a true cross section of Austin residents. Young/old, people of color, residents, tourists, etc.	1
I value the peace, serenity, and beauty or nature.	1
I value being able to be close to the river, to be getting exercise in the outdoors, and to see Austin from different vantage points. Sadly, the trail itself has gotten much more "frou-frou" over the years. It could be plopped into Dallas or Houston and know would be able to tell. And whether anyone admits it or not, the trail has become full of wealthy white people. TFN is a predominantly white organization. And the apartments and condos in close proximity to the trail are also full of wealthier white people.	1
I love that it is serene even though it is in the middle of the city. An escape without leaving.	1

I love that it a somewhat wild preserve of nature in the middle of the city, and the way the river is at the center of it all. The new(ish) boardwalk is a pleasant development. I love that it's an easy way to be outdoors and exercise, accessible from many parts of the city.	1
I live close enough to be able to take advantage of what it offers without having to drive	1
I hope that someday in the future it will be like it used to be..beautiful and safe.	1
How it is unpaved and has a lot of shade. It is not like similar trails in Dallas and Houston.	1
having a safe clean space in the city where we can enjoy nature and the company others.	1
Having a nonpaved surface to run so close to my home.	1
Having a nature trail so close and connected to downtown while removing the craziness of actually being downtown.	1
getting to be out in nature despite urban nature of downtown austin. comfortable walking/ jogging trail that is easy on my knees vs using paved streets. we started using trails with our children 35 yrs ago and now doing same with our grandkids. generally clean and peaceful (other than over whelming homeless issues).	1
everything about it	1
Everything - the greenspace downtown, the people-watching, the place I can go to decompress.	1
enjoyed public art such as the pianos and the bicycle exhibit. please don't make it commercialized	1
Easy access to nature. Multiple entry points. Running on the gravel on paths big enough for 2-3 people to run together. Access to the water for kayaking.	1
Connectivity. The ability to walk or run or bike (please, keep the scooters out) without negotiating traffic. The openness without commercial development or events that block access.	1
Connection with nature. Watching the wind create ripples on the water, seeing the bald cypress change colors in the fall, areas where it's a tunnel of trees, the rushes on the downstream end of the lake & getting to see so many birds and turtles.	1
Cleanliness	1
Both the simplicity and variety of it, which sounds a bit odd I know. The trail is simple - a trail through nature by the water. The trail is variable depending on time of year, who is using it at any given time. Anyone can use the trail - even people using walkers for assistance. Dogs. Babies and their proud parents.	1

Being able to run in nature rather than along the roads of Austin.	1
Art pieces to learn and read about.	1
accessibility from creek network across the city / all walks of life / easy access to downtown / views of downtown / people-watching / dogs	1
Access for all.	1
A wonderful place to get needed exercise outdoors	1
A traffic free, crushed granite running surface with drinking fountains.	1
A long connected trail, nature in the middle of the City, the ability to kayak, the turtles, egrets, and cypress trees, the bats under congress bridge, the pedestrian bridges, the wildflowers in the Spring, the public land.	1

When you hear the expression "arts and culture", what comes to mind?

Response	Count
museums	2
When I hear art and culture I worry about impacting the natural beauty of train with what some people might call art and worry that their definition of art will have a negative impact on the trail.	1
visual expression. performing arts. music. culture.	1
visual arts, performing arts, art activities, live music	1
Visual (static) and performing (kinetic) arts (not necessarily music).	1
Vibrant expressions of who and what makes up our city. I am from San Antonio so this is colorful decorations, sculpture, street festivals, etc.	1
Tradition, history, and celebration unique to a group or ethnicity.	1
This survey is taking way more of my time than i anticipated..... I'll pass on the remainder of the questions. I think some art around the trail is OK -- but there are plenty of people using the trail -- and i'd like to spread the art to places that people might not already use as much! Thanks	1

Things that represent our community and residents in a meaningful and creative way	1
They can't be separated.	1
The many events that no longer happen The North/South Tug of War, AquaFest, Carnaval, etc.	1
the fabric and life of the community	1
The "arts" to me = institutions (opera, ballet, museums, etc) but "culture" is the experiencing of those arts, contributing to the arts (as an artist or patron), and also having a open mind about all activities around the city whether or not traditionally 'art' focused.	1
Something interesting to look at or understand.	1
sense of place and identity	1
Sculptures, history	1
Sculptures that honor local people or help increase understanding/appreciation for the nature around us. Adding a spark of fun, surprise, and inspiration.	1
Sculpture, painting, mosaics, etc that invites the viewer to experience something in a new or unusual way.	1
Sculpture	1
Regarding the trail? Not much. I have seen very few installations on the trail and would love to see more (e.g., the bikes that used to be by the boathouse). If you go to Seattle and walk the trail along the water, you will see numerous art installations. They are interesting and it's great. You could also emulate some of the High Line (NYC) features. They vary things a lot and also you can access activities immediately by going down to the street.	1
Purposeful, action, activism, not just pretty things for photographs.	1
Public art sculptures or performances	1
Proper natural and historical interpretation of points of interest along the trail. I would highly recommend engaging Ted Eubanks on this as he has the experience (nationally and internationally) to get this done right.	1
Professionals in visual and performing arts	1
Permanent exhibits, temporary exhibits. Different cultures sharing their food and/or music.	1
Paintings, murals, music, dance, food	1

Paintings seminars on different topics hands on activities.	1
Painting, local crafts, sculpture, music, dance	1
Musical and art exhibits	1
Music, visual arts, dance	1
Music, performance art (plays, musicals, etc.), visual art.	1
music, dance, visual art, photography, food	1
music, art, dancing, festival,	1
Music and lots of beautiful plants along the trail	1
Music	1
Museums, sculptures, music, dance, artwork	1
Museums, sculptures, murals, nightlife, music, restaurants, educational institutions, languages, film	1
Murals, sculpture, paintings, music, and food!	1
murals, music, food, and dancing.	1
Making art accessible to everyday citizens	1
Lots of things NOT connected to my enjoyment of the trail. Sorry.	1
Literature, music, food, and galleries.	1
Leave it for the museums. You are taking away from NATURE by putting things on the trail that is Not part of "nature". Let us enjoy the fresh air, trees and the outdoors.	1
Leave it for the museums. This trail is for enjoying nature and the "culture" of the trees that have been there for many years.	1
Large public art displays, live music, performance spaces	1
I've enjoyed the art installations but worry about uses that concentrate people and block the trail for pedestrians/runners/ cyclists. Austin has so many venues indoors and out for music or other celebrations. Please don't use the trail for events that spill over and block other uses (I can still remember how Aquafest used to preempt the trail). The trail is also one of a few outdoors spaces without commercial vendors. Please don't encourage food trucks or similar enterprises in the parks.	1

It means seeing diversity in all its many forms. The more expensive Austin gets, the more people of color are being pushed further and further out. But people of color exist and need to feel like we belong. Everyone should be able to see themselves represented in some form or fashion. Hispanic culture doesn't need to exist ONLY on the east side. African American culture doesn't need to exist ONLY during Black History Month.	1
In the context of a running/walking trail, I would say statues and three-dimensional sculptures. Clean, modern facilities can be "art". Could also consider landscaping art	1
In terms of the trail, I would like to see small showcases by local groups. Not just one grand event by an arts group, or some giant festival. But I understand the limitations along the trail that attendees not already traveling there could have easy access without remote bussing, and the general population does not pay for ride share or use public transit. As a former vendor at a public event there, I also understand not every going to the park will feel like interrupting exercise or leaving their picnic to go see the event. So I have no solution really. Showcase cabinets and security cameras at wide spots and intersections in the trail and park?	1
In Austin "arts and culture" have come to mean pretentious displays by people who receive a generous income from the city and who have inside connections to the city bureaucracy. Nature and its natural beauty are timeless and eternal.	1
i think of the spirit of a place and the creativity that embodies it and is expressed in a society.	1
for the Trail is means creating an opening toward embracing our differences, broadening our depths and reimagining neighborhoods and renewable energies.	1
Expressions of creativity and examples of traditions unique to the human experience	1
Expressions of artistic works in any medium, and the space for people to enjoy it. Art on its own is nothing, but art and culture is the meeting of the two, where art influences society and vice-versa	1
Expanding the visual and tactile experience of being in the world.	1
Diverse history, background and customs.	1
different people's backgrounds collective history and moments remembered	1
Culture is the shared attitudes, values, goals, and practices that define a group of people. Art is the items created by people of various culture to creatively define who they are.	1
creative, unique and beautiful displays that tell a story and/or relate to an area	1
Creative ideas and artwork that reflect diversity and the vibe of our area.	1

Creative expression of all the unique people and their histories that make up the community.	1
Connections, variety, storytelling, helping people pause, respecting different ways of looking at the world and learning to stretch and push my own perceptions, music, dance, cultural events, indigenous connections to land and water, opportunity for community members who have an existing connection with a space to share their experience through a variety of art forms, inclusive	1
Celebration of creating and self-expression	1
Celebrating the diverse cultures that make up Austin's population, raising awareness about important issues impacting residents of Austin, involving children and young people in our city through creative projects.	1
Buskers on the pedestrian bridge. Graffiti on the train bridge. The throngs of families and friends that visit free springs. Informality and humanity. Our respect for green space and the springs.	1
Blocking of the trail with events sponsored by people who do not know that the trail is a Place of exercise and gathering large groups of people for arts and cultural events causes congestion with people blocking the entire of the trail causing danger to all by preventing bikes, runners and walkers to be able to easily pass,.	1
Artwork, holiday celebrations and food, all of which are wonderful but none of which are really necessary on an exercise/commuting trail that is already overcrowded. It is troubling to me that all of the folks running this project are from the arts or cultural communities. Why isn't there a voice from the many running/biking/hiking groups that might have a different viewpoint about priorities?	1
Arts and Culture in an outdoor public area should be considered differently than A&C in general. I think it all should be a reflection or an extension of nature, not an intrusion/dominance of nature. I prefer it not create litter, but be made of decomposable objects, like an Andy Goldsworthy sculpture. I can understand the bicycle sculpture, even though it's metal, it's a reflection of Butler being a "bike trail." And technically, metal is decomposable, and it's magnificent. But a lovely sculpture, like a Miro, just for art's sake - no, put that in at a library. As far as live music in public places, be it rock, folk, string quartet, Tejano or R&B, I don't think it belongs in a natural setting, because it's an intrusion, regardless of the culture it represents. But I can see having the occasional concert, but not a gazebo where there's constantly music, because that's forcing human dominance over birdsongs in the environment. It should respect and reflect the natural world.	1
Arts and culture are events and activities which can happen anywhere and don't need to be happening on the Trail.	1

Arts - music, painting, drawing, landscape, architecture, writing, theater, comedy, etc that reflects the values, obstacles, or challenges of and / or convey what it's like to be in a particular place and time. Culture - the culmination of stories told in a particular place and time about a group's history, aspirations, beliefs, fears, and values.

Art and culture from my surroundings as well as that produced by my community. The sculptures that may be seen and provide an insight to our very broad artistic community. "arts and culture" does not invoke the trails around the Lake. We have Museums and centers for that. I want a natural environment for my walks around the Lake.

These types of experiences should be curated and in certain areas that can manage the traffic, not throughout the trail.	1
The trail is for use as a trail. The art is nice, but what advantage is there to an art class outdoors? I'm happy to share it with people at all different paces (and parts could be more wheelchair friendly), but it is already crowded much of the day and I worry this type of activity will make the trail less useable for its basic purpose.	1
The pianos several years ago were awesome!	1
The creation of unique art along the trail is such a great way to express local creativity and set up apart as a true destination to visit.	1
Temporary unifying acts like holding hands around the lake or something on the water, bringing nearby schools to the trail, linking the projects at the trail with work in nearby schools so students get to participate from start to finish, walking/biking tours that connect the art along the trail with art in nearby neighborhoods	1
Someone could lead historical bike rides. I'd love to see more and more variety of temporary exhibits. When Hispanic culture is celebrated I'd like it to be more than simply mariachi music.	1
restore the natural environment	1
Performance!	1
Musical performances	1
Music events, like the Zilker Garden concerts last year	1
music	1
Multicultural events	1
More Public art projects	1
More information, art, or interactive displays about bats	1
Landscaping / planting art	1
It would be cool if there was something that everyone could participate in or add to as they passed it. These are bad examples and not things I want to see but I'm talking about things like the following except good examples: the chewed gum wall in Seattle, the pad locks in the bridge in France(?)	1

I think before we start putting money into arts and entertainment we need to complete all the maintenance needed and continue to do it on a very regular basis.	1
I think a large part of maintaining the culture of the trail is ownership and ownership comes with the responsibility of keeping it up. Thus, I would like to see more volunteer opportunities for cleanups/trail maintenance/plantings, etc. as part of the 'culture' of the trail.	1
I really enjoyed the pianos from a few years back.	1
I only want to enjoy the trail and join with nature for a unique experience.	1
i love the idea of music such as the Mariachis pictured above. Art that can be explored tactilely would be cool. Or that can be climbed in and over and through. little historical markers would be cool	1
I enjoy the Stevie Ray statue and other art projects that are located along the trail in locations near streets and buildings, but I do not like art installations that intrude on the natural areas of the trail.	1
I am up to all activities at the park, as long as they do not damage or remove our existing flora and fauna, which is indispensable to the beauty of the park.	1
I am not interested in art along the trail.	1
Events/installations that include educational info about the native plants, birds, and other wildlife, and how people can contribute to their well-being, decrease impact on the environment. I don't want to see the nature experience cluttered with social/cultural engagement and installations. One person's art experience is another's eyesore. The advice not to ever gift someone with visual art because it's very personal and thus hard to do successfully should be considered when gifting art to an entire community. Less is more.	1
enjoy listening to the various musicians that sit out on the trail and entertain others for free	1
Being able to enjoy Nature instead of things placed there that are not created naturally.	1
As noted, I don't "use" the trail for arts and culture. I hope that whatever you pick, it will not interfere with the original purpose and much needed space in this city, to enjoy & connect nature. Focus on keeping the trail and its environs clean, trimmed, trash picked up (more).	1
art fairs	1
All for more art in public places. I do think it should focus on our local art community - which is large.	1

----------	-------

Would like more activities and installations for younger kids. Things that are very colorful and are ok to touch/feel/climb on. Would love to learn more about local artists and to see them celebrated.	1
Visiting family and friends Austin always want to see and take pictures of the Stevie Ray statue. I think more arts and culture activities would give me more reasons to visit the trail beyond my own recreation. It's a natural gathering space for Austinites and those exploring the city	1
They would not. I like the trail for nature. Arts and culture have a place, I just don't think that place is along the trail.	1
They would not improve my experience	1
They would be nice, but the biggest improvement to my use of the Trail would be being able to count on the restrooms being frequently shut down for weeks or months.	1

Preferably nothing noisy. There was a temporary sound piece at one point which I really disliked. Some sculptures are great, like Bicycles Forever by Ai Wei Wei. I don't care for the fort-lidia piece. It looks junky. I enjoyed the Blue Lapis dance performance under the I35 bridge. I guess my feelings about cultural activities is mixed. The primary reason I use the trail is the natural environment. If we have cultural activities the standard of excellence should be high.	1
other uses for a great space in town are always fun	1
Not sure it would. Any installation would have to blend well with the natural environment and be as maintenance free as possible.	1
My best experience is when the man-made art is kept separate and does not interfere with my appreciation of the natural areas of the trail. My greatest appreciation of the trail is to get away from the artificiality of the city into a natural oasis.	1
More spaces for informal music and art	1
more often and more diverse. adding music, art, social activities helps liven up the trail	1 minimally. Mostly, I would like to see well-maintained trails and wooded areas. Need to eliminate the invasive vines.	1
just another added dimension of richness	1
It's always fun to have something to look at or hear on the trail, especially while running or biking when looking at the scenery is a big part of the fun	1
It wouldn't improve it.	1
It would make me more likely to visit as a person who typically doesn't enjoy exercise very much and does not live downtown. It would set this area apart from parks closer to my house, like Mueller.	1
It would keep the experience new and exciting each time.	1
It would give me something to look at and listen to while out and about.	1
It would be a nice reminder that someone actually cares about at least trying to highlight other cultures. It concerns me greatly that the people leading this effort are not actually from Austin - or even Texas.	1
it will take away from the natural beauty of it. It is a part of nature...don't try to re-invent the wheel.	1
It is always nice to change things up a bit, have new things to see and experience.	1

I'm retired, so I need public art stimulus to stay healthy	1
I'd like to see additional sculpture or murals that are aligned with the Trail	1
I would like to see live music performances along the trail. I would like talks about the wildlife and the plants, etc,	1
I would generally be more motivated to use the trail and participate more often	1
I would enjoy seeing interesting and thought-provoking pieces and installations as I walk or run by, and would probably stop to explore the first time I pass.	1
I typically just use the trail to get from A to B on my bike but would love to have more of a reason to linger and enjoy the space!	1
i think art has the ability to allow you to see things through a different lens, and i would love to see how art on the trail could draw users to see and/or understand nature at the trail in a different way.	1
I only see nature-centric art improving my enjoyment of the Trail. I enjoy the Trail because it's one of the few natural experiences left in Austin. I don't want to see it turned into a version of the amusement park Robert Crenshaw fought against not so long ago.	1
I go so often. It is exciting when "something new" pops up. Also, art could be incorporated into wayfinding.	1
Honestly I wouldn't. Others might, but it shouldn't interfere with initial purpose. Seattle does a pretty good job: https://www.seattle.gov/arts/programs/public-art/waterfront-seattle	1
Gives us yet another reason to visit the trail and enjoy with friends.	1
Creating new interest along the trail with rotating or changing pieces, or possibly creating new landmarks if its a permanent piece.	1
creating a destination at different time, allow me to reflect on my city and the human experience here in a new way	1
Arts and culture would get in the way of my enjoying the Trail.	1
Arts and culture can most improve my use and enjoyment of the trail by being presented somewhere else and not the trail. I am not against art and culture, I just feel the poor trail is getting so much use already I would hate to see more uses along it.	1
Art that fits into the natural surroundings. Architecture like beautiful bridges over creeks, retaining walls, stairs, some statues are okay but they should fit into the nature surroundings.	1

place these at various spots along the trail where people can step off the trail and enjoy without blocking runners/joggers etc. allow families and small children to enjoy the trails	1
Perhaps some people, but not me. I prefer the natural setting without the art.	1
People need to feel welcome. And they can't feel welcome if they don't see themselves represented. A mexican-american family of four should be able to see themselves represented on this trail. They, quite frankly, should be able to take a walk or go for a bike ride without having to pay. It's not just for people who live in the condos.	1
Not sure	1
Not at all.	1
More reasons to go to the trail	1
More people require more maintenance.	1
More direct invitations and promotions of events to neighborhoods around and near the lake. More funding for neighborhood artists and for school based projects.	1
It would encourage people like me who aren't big into exercise to visit the trail for the purpose of seeing new and interesting work.	1
It would benefit many older people that feel stuck in the endless wave of the pandemic	1
It goes back to feeling ownership of the trail. If folks interact with the trail in a cultural way they could feel more connected to it.	1
It could be something that the surrounding neighborhoods and community really connect to or take pride in. It can be an extension of Austin pride even.	1
It could be just one more reason why the trail is such a special and valuable place for Austin!	1
I'm already connected to the Trail, so it is difficult for me to imagine what would help connect someone who is not connected.	1
i would hope that arts & culture might attract new visitors to the trail and give more Austinites a shared experience to have as a collective memory.	1
I would be a good way to get people out and meeting up with people, getting to know their community.	1

I see art and culture activities and especially installations disconnecting people from the trails. It is a shocking and unnatural experience that makes me sad to see the natural jewel of nature spoiled. I can appreciate that artists need to make a living and that art can contribute to the urban experience. However I do not like to see art installations "in my face" when I seek a retreat into nature. It is my hope that artificial structures are kept in the already artificial areas of the trail and that they not spoil the few natural retreats that Austin is lucky to still have.

Folks would gather, when they wouldn't have had reason to before especially with an intentional focus on Black, Indigenous and Chicano cultures, it will help keep artists and culture bearers of Austin connected to the city as we are struggling with affordability and gentrification. It can offer a way to connect with other immigrant cultures that are often less visible unless you are in a specific part of town. It would be very exciting to see artists working diverse disciplines have work and experiences along the trail. It can operationalize the image of Austin as a creative community for the Trail Foundation, PARD and in public space.

coming together around music, Celebrating the trail.

Bringing new audiences to the trail / wayfinding / scavenger hunts / QR Code-driven historical tours

Bring in people that don't usually take advantage and enjoy the trail.

As an already large attraction, visitors who already plan to use the trail will then have access to cultural events/art/etc that they didn't before. It will also draw in new users.

Arts and culture activities can be anywhere and don't need to be on the Trail.

Not sure, hopefully not creating homeless gathering spots though if that's what you mean - that is the only community I can think of that is actually along the trail	1

not at all	1
It would give them a chance to be productive & inventive	1
It would encourage people to visit neighborhoods that aren't their own and provide a sense of unity in the city.	1
It could encourage people to visit and learn about communities they don't often see -- for example, as a west Austin resident, I see the places along the west end of the trail often. Outside of biking the whole loop, I don't often spend time in the neighborhoods or parks of east Austin. Arts and culture activities would give me more opportunities to stay and explore.	1 increasing their value in the eyes and minds of people passing by. appreciating it all. Respecting their right to be there.	1
Increasing diversity, improving trail users understanding of minority culture,	1
I think I've already answered this.	1
I think if we add more stuff to the already overloaded trail it will detract from the trail.	1
I enjoy the art, but just adding more things to an already crowded trail is more likely to defeat its basic purpose. A trail is for walking, running, biking and appreciating the natural environment. There are plenty of other places for music, classes and gatherings of all kinds, and food trucks. there is no need to clutter the trail with retail opportunities and crowds that block it for everyone else.	1
I don't see a benefit.	1
I don't know.	1
Greater participation	1
expose people to new ideas	1
Could include historical information / could highlight art from local artists / may encourage people to explore more sections of the trail.	1

yes. I can remember Aquafest being so important it fenced off the trail and destroyed the quiet with drag boat races. Creating the same kind of access problems and noise in a culturally sensitive manner isn't what the trail is for. We should be welcoming to all and improve access through better connections to Walnut and Waller Creeks and a usable trail in Guerrero Park. That will add people who come to use a trail.	1
Yes, We don't want too many activities because the trail can get too crowded.	1
Yes, trash, noise, parking, loss of serenity and the specialness of being out doors. The events/displays must be limited and strategically placed.	1
Yes, the expense	1
Yes, my concerns are that the group leading this effort doesn't appear to be diverse. I hope I'm wrong. And it doesn't appear to be led by people from Austin. Surely we have the expertise right here.	1
Yes, many concerns. The tranquility of the Trail will be destroyed with too much expansion.	1
Yes, if disruptive to enjoyment of quiet, nature--either with noise or traffic or commercial activity, and might divert funding from basic much needed maintenance.	1
The trail itself should always be open since it is how many people traverse the city. So if activities occur they should be off of the physical trail in any of the adjacent spaces.	1
The trail can be very crowded as it is already with walkers and runners. Adding arts and culture events, where people are likely to just stop in the middle of the trail will create obstacles and cause conflict.	1
That they would be overpowering of the natural connection. They need to fit in with nature and not just be a sideshow.	1
Stop trying to take away Nature and add other things	1
Some of the homeless encampments would likely need to be removed.	1
See above - tents along the trail have already been a huge issue and while it has gotten better it's still not great and I would hate to see anything that would increase the amount of trash and debris on the trail or in the lake - whether due to homeless occupancy or just increased number of people hanging out who don't value it	1
safety of artwork and trail users	1

none so long as free or very modestly priced, advertise so people know about them and keep them off the trail itself. need good signage to know where to go to enjoy them	1
No so long as it does not disturb the trail or require more pavement.	1
My only concern would be the damage that any additional items added or events may do to the nature that is currently available for our enjoyment. I would not like our trail damaged or trees being removed.	1
More and larger crowds will require more and better upkeep especially the bathrooms	1
it would become commercialized.	1
Inadvertently attracting undersirable traffic / congestion	1
Impacts	1
I would want to make sure that efforts to include Black, Indigenous, and Chicano artists are prioritized, in addition to having substantial funding not only for strong work but for a strong artistic community.	1
I would not want art installations to negatively impact wildlife like bats that are already in need of our protection.	1
I would be concerned about arts and culture activities being so close to the Trail that the spectators end up blocking the Trail.	1
I think things don't always have to be super deep or politically charged, while there is importance to art like that- art should also be healing or just plain fun.	1
i think there needs to be a curated balance of how much art is installed, its permanence and the frequency/duration of events.	1
I think it's important to speak directly to the communities of people who have lived for generations along the Trail, and learn what types of activities they would most enjoy, and ensure that creating new ways of using the Trail does not negatively impact them. I love all the ideas of more art and programming, but want to urge caution in the development of this natural space. Part of the reason it is such a treasure is because of the wildlife and native plants and trees. I would hate to see that aspect lost, much diminished or paved over.	1

I have a great deal of concern. The trail is already strained at times by the number of people using it. I think any activities should not compromise everyday citizen's use of the trail. Austin already has a traffic problem so I am concerned about that being exacerbated. The environmental impact of any activity would be of concern to me, from trash, non-compostable materials to degradation of the landscape. The trail is a very special place RIGHT NOW with no additions. Great care must be taken not to commercialize or overdevelop the trail.

I go the the trail to unwind and destress. I don't want art that is depressing or politisized. I want to be reminded of the beauty in the world.

I am very concerned that "invasive art" may spoil the lovely natural areas of the trail.

I am concerned about the criminal element attending. There is a large homeless camp that has set up near the parakeets, close to Rainey Street and some of the ongoing construction. They have begun to leave the camps and walk along the trail. I have been harassed twice now. We need more police patrols. We need emergency boxes The shores need to be cleaned up

I am afraid adding more pressure to trail usage will detract from the current user experience. I would rather seem the city spend money to develop more locals for people to enjoy rather than putting more pressure on what we already have. Austin need more open spaces and not more stuff on the current open spaces.

Don't turn it into an amusement part by adding more and more to appease different groups. The less facturing of the messages, the better.

Don't tilt too much in favor of human art. Nature is beautiful on its own. AND GET THE HOMELESS CAMPS OUT OF OUR PARKS. CLEAN WATERSHEDS FROM LITTER AND DUMPING. I did send a 311 request to clean Country Club Creek at the foot Bridge. Thankfully the crap was hauled off!

Don't take away from Nature

Blocking the trail would not be good

Activities should be welcoming and accessible to the communities (ethnic/historic) surrounding them

What aspects of the creative life of communities along the Trail would be important to...

Response	Count
this is a hard question. i think that might be up to the communities.	1
the trail passes through a variety of neighborhoods - its not the same throughout. the creative life of th at particular area could be expressed and maybe something connecting all the areas to a whole, like a map with landmarks, but also little hidden gems to discover.	1
The range of cultures within the community would be nice or how the people who live there connect w ith the nature around them.	1
The people, institutions and buildings that were displaced to build the city you see before you today.	1
The nature trail is a nature trail...not a museum. Don't try to change what God created to make it som ething else	1
the life of the wildlife the history of the Butler Trail	1
The least intrusive aspects.	1

that should be addressed with those communities. with attention to displaced cultures -- both in ethnicity and artistic form	1
Stick with natural and historical interpretation	1
Something that connects & educates to nature in central Texas	1
Programs Reflective of activities that incorporate art & music	1
Not important.	1
nature, gentrification, art making, what it means to be an "Austinite", food	1
Music, histories, fine arts expression	1
Maybe I should have read the top part more thoroughly but I'm having a hard time understand what the "communities along the Trail" really are. Is it just specifically the few apartments and hotels and businesses that actually butt up to the trail or the downtown part of Austin as a whole? I'm not sure but I think this project should speak to the beauty and heart of Austin as a whole community and be something that everyone who has a deep connection to the trail would enjoy. I have lived in Austin since 2008 and spent most of my time living north but I would travel to the trail every weekend. I now live within 1 mile walking distance to the trail but my connection to it started long before I lived near it.	1
I would prefer to see art and programs by local artists than by random famous artists from around the country/world in this type of setting. I would also prefer to engage with arts and culture programs that were culturally sensitive or authentic, and are trauma-informed. I would not attend arts and culture programs about certain historical figures like Confederate leaders, for example.	1
I think the trail should be for natural beauty and not for art. I do think the trail should promote a culture of wellness and health.	1
I am a creative artist and need to quietness of the Trail to refresh my mind. I neither want nor need my arts and culture to be on the Trail.	1
history / previous landholders / artists from Austin / water quality & protection / non-motorized mobility / dogs & kids	1
Don't know	1
Community leaders, important events, artists from that community, art that speaks to that community (language and otherwise)	1
Austin has many types of artists. I am not sure specifically. I do love the murals.	1

Artwork, installations and murals are generally a nice addition. Better signage to help people orient as other trails are connected could also do a lot to interpret the historical context (Pease park has done this well). But actual connectivity to all of Austin's communities will do the most to draw people to the trail and build a constituency for it. Why can't UT students connect via Waller Creek like I remember doing? Why is there a years-long break at the Gererro Park bridge that makes it dangerous to try to reach the Montopolis Bridge? Why are there no trails running south from the lake except the Greenbelt?

All ages and all people from all walks of life. 1

I'm sure others know better than me	1
I think the trail should maintain its natural beauty - we don't need art to make it better. The entire trail should emphasize health.	1
i think that certain communities along the lake would have certain places in mind. i think many of these kinds of spaces could be community-building as there are so many new developed or redeveloped areas, such as by Oracle, where the events could help new neighbors develop new bonds and friendships.	1
I don't know what community focused means. As opposed to what?	1
Holly Street, the dam at Pleasant Valley	1
Gererro Park has so much potential and should be further built out, especially with connectivity to Walnut Creek, the Montopolis Bridge and the new trail out to the airport. Importing disadvantaged communities for a cultural event is a lot less useful than providing the same access to outdoor activity and commuting options.	1
Fiesta Gardens comes to mind for me because I used to love going to Veg Fest there every year. There are definitely places where gathering seems more appropriate than others but I think as a whole what makes the trail so special is the fact that you are among the community no matter which part you're on.	1

Are there areas along the Trail that are more appropriate for arts and culture activities...

Response	Count

Zilker, Auditorium Shores & Butler Park, venues like the Dougherty Arts Center, Long Center, Zach Scott, Roy Guerro Park	1
Zilker great lawn, Aud shores	1
Well clearly some places along the trail are going to be better for certain TYPES of activities. But I think the idea of what arts and culture activities are can be expanded and thus, can happen virtually anywhere along the trail. Some areas are already over-used, other areas have been ignored.	1

Vic Mathias Shores is a natural gathering place in the center of the city. I think Zilker makes a nice space too, as does Lakeshore Park	1
Venues like the arts center, the Long Center, Zach Scott, park concert venues	1
Unknown	1
There is nothing about standing next to a lake that makes art and culture more or less appropriate. The trail is crowded now in its intended use, so the question should be where can a crowd be accommodated without preempting other uses. We just got a really nice music venue at Waterloo park but the trail connecting to it has been destroyed for years. Look for places where a concert or other event can fit (Waterloo Park, Butler Shores, the Zilker Great Lawn) and don't try to shoehorn an event across the trail others use.	1
The part Live Nation/C3 took over, Auditorium Shores.	1
The MACC	1
Putting arts and culture activities on the north side of the lake (along downtown) would be great, because it's a high trafficked area and would maybe deter the people who are homeless from hanging in the high traffic area.	1
pfluger bridge, seating areas at the boardwalk, larger lawn areas that allow for assembly, the intake building the forthcoming bridge at Longhorn Dam, major gateway entrances	1
Not sure if Zilker is considered along the trail but that seems like the obvious answer	1
not on the nature Butler trail	1
No, do it somewhere else.	1
MACC	1
larger open areas that are sufficient to avoid crowding	1
I think it's very important to hold events and install art in areas that do not impede traffic. Some folks are only using the trail to exercise or commute. With Austin's population increase, this can often be challenging.	1
I think all areas of the trail could potentially benefit	1
I like to think everywhere but close to big parking spaces seems like that attracts everyone even those who don't really go to walk the trail.	1

Fiesta Gardens, The Great Lawn, and Auditorium Shores	1
Festival Beach; Butler shores; the "beach" area by electric drive;	1
Don't know	1
Don't know	1
can not think of any	1
Art and cultural activities should be placed well away from the trail so as not to block the free flow of users or create safety hazards.	1
Areas that are not pinch points, prone to vandalism and have crime prevention through environmental design.	1
Areas near to streets and parking for ease of access and to preserve more remote natural areas.	1
Areas near good public transportation	1
Along the many open spaces that abut the trail on the north/south sides of the trail	1
All along the trail.	1

When you think about the natural qualities of the Trail, what comes to mind?

Response	Count
Wild flowers along the trails. benches to sit and enjoy the space. picnic tables to sit and read.	1
We walk the trail 1-2 times a week for exercise, to enjoy the trees/water, and interact with other folks. We also enjoy the variety of exercise and nature experiences on and around the Trail. HOWEVER! This has been compromised by the homeless and crime. We were disappointed in the Trail Foundation's mostly silent response regarding homeless and crime events compromising the trail. We didn't use the trail during that time due to fear for safety. Part of the arts and culture plan needs to be CRIME PREVENTION AND PRESERVATION OF THE TRAIL AND ART. Those groups that promote art and culture on the trail need to take a stand against the crime and homelessness that impacts the trail.	1
water, vegetation, wildlife, living the best life	1
water, shade, native plants, wildlife	1
Trees, wildlife, and being able to avoid traffic and feel as though I'm away from downtown.	1
Trees, water, seasonal flowers and flowering trees	1

Trees, plants, flowers and wildlife	1
trees and other plants, water, animals (non-domesticated) along the trail and in the water	1
Trees and flowers	1

the wildlife. the lake. the nature	1
The water, the trees, the wildlife.	1
The water, the trees, the wild life, the sounds, the trails, the cleanliness of paths, the colors	1
The water, I like the crushed granite sections, the trees	1
The water the trees several outlooks flowers.	1
The water is number 1 for sure. Also the trees especially on the part by the rowing center and that little peninsula area over by the dam. I love the dirt and that I always have a "dirt tan line" from sweat and dust after a long run on a hot day.	1
The variety of trees and wildlife. Proximity to the water.	1
The trees, wildlife and dirt trail. The open meadows east of I-35 and along Lamar.	1
The trees, they provide us with oxygen and such amazing shade, the changing colors through out the seasons, as well as shelter for animals.	1
the trees	1
The river, Shade, cool breeze off the water, birds, separation from the city, trash, pesticides, herbicides, fertilizer, oil, sediment, old dams, concrete, and slime.	1
The natural part of the trail is being infringed upon. There are far too many bicycles, scooters, people walking dogs and runners.	1
The many trees and non paved walkways	1
The limestone paths instead of concrete, the different plants, trees and water features. Also the living creatures who inhabit them.	1
The lake, birds, fish, wildflowers, dogs.	1

The Lake	1
The interface to the body of water, as well as interludes with existing parks.	1
The importance of protecting and preserving the native flora and fauna around the Trail, returning as much of the area to natural habitat as possible, the need to have regular clean-up days along the lake shore (there's lots of trash and litter in some areas).	1
The forest that surrounds the trail and the lake	1
The beauty of unspoiled nature and the environment.	1
the beauty of the water, wildlife, surrounding vegetation and the naturalness of the dirt trail itself	1
The beautiful trees, wildflowers, lake and wildlife that inhabit the trail. How sad that the trees are being choked out by vines and no one is doing Anything about it. The wildflower field pictured no longer has flowers bc someone let a project be placed there and those plants are too closely spaced, unkempt, and have decimated the wildflowers-the seeding in another area does not have enough sunlight this very few flowers anymore. Again, planning seems to have been done by persons unfamiliar w the trail and TX plants in general.	1
The area behind the Nature Center, the wildflowers, the water, the trees, the rocks, the bats	1
Tall trees and a wide variety of plant species, representing many ecosystems	1
Shade, fresh air, water, open space	1
Shade, Beautiful trees, views to the water, wildflowers	1
shade trees, water, wildlife	1
Seasonal, changing Flora Water Sharing the path with people and animals easy access a place to connect with friends	1
Seasonal observations, peaceful moments, wildlife	1
Scenic beauty, fresh air, quiet exercise, and poison ivy. Poison ivy: bad.	1 river, large tree, glittering water during the summer, bats, birds	1
Proximity to a body of water; wildlife; no motorized traffic; no artificial lighting	1

Probably everything everyone else has listed, but I'm also thinking about the recent photo of Lady Bird 50 years ago on an open dirt bank close to downtown. How amazing would it be to feature specific photos from before the trail existed. Could large containment nets near major drainage points somehow catch trash in a flood without impeding flow? I'm imagining more large mini ponds within the lake bordered by the net with bouys (sp) that rise as the water level does. They could be anchored so they only restrict surface flow. They'd have to be flexible enough give when very large branches and such flow across.	1
plantings along the trail, the river's edge (where the land meets the water) - unfortunately a lot of that is disturbed recently by more trash, by that trash not being regularly cleared, and by people being permitted to claim public spaces as homes	1
Pedestrian friendly trails not interrupted by cars; natural environment all around including the lake, animals, plants etc.; peaceful time with friends and family	1
open space to move and enjoy nature. Free of traffic.	1
No cars--that's the biggest difference from every other movement we make in our lives. The big trees and wildlife early in the morning are also a joy to see.	1
need to be enhanced. slowly plantings are being implemented. but some areas seem neglected. and too much trash along trail and in trees. might be from homeless and cuts in city budget	1
Nature, untouched by humans.	1
NATURAL QUALITIES involve nature and NOT things built in nature.	1
Native and xeriscape plants well suited to the environment, tree cover, visual access to the water, animals	1
More native plants can be added	1
Like the low lighting, the mix of gravel and cement. Needs to be MUCH more clean-up along waterfront after rain, and more trash cans.	1
LB/ Town Lake, including the turtles, swans and ducks. Gorgeous cypress trees and natural foliage Formerly lots of native wildflowers (now weeds and cactus)	1
Large cypress trees and the birds that live in them, bats under congee bridge, turtles in the Colorado river, wildflowers, native plants, large oaks and pecan trees, barton springs, salamanders, egrets, cranes, grackles, jays, etc.	1

Keep the plants as native as possible and use this as a way to educate the public about why the native plants are so important...habitat, food source, water use, etc. Education about non-point source pollution might be helpful.	1
It's dirt rather than paved and it feels separate from the city.	1
It's a cool oasis where you can walk your stress into the earth. The wildflowers and spring-blooming trees - even more breathtaking because they're so short-lived. The water itself is soothing. But the wildlife is what I always hope to see. Shorebirds, waterfowl, birds in general. Otters have been seen there - they're finally expanding back into their old range. Ocelots are going to be reintroduced into their original habitat in Texas - but this is probably too urban, too much traffic for them.	1
It is such a great natural element to experience in the middle of the city. The trees, water, animals,	1
Includes a lot of native planting. There is also a lot of urban creeks connecting to the lake, which means a lot of collected trash debris. I like the on-river seating / boat launches / turtle & bird refuges. We need to keep the poison ivy under control! I love the new wildflower fields throughout. No one really uses the lake near the old AquaFest bandstands anymore (along fiesta gardens)	1
In the middle of the Trail is a dammed river. The overall ecosystem of it needs to be better cared for, so that we have better water quality. Most creeks in Austin lead to the Trail and so it really is about a much larger ecosystem that needs to be considered. I love the Bald Cypress and and I love how much cooler it is when you are on the trail near the water. I don't love the poison ivy or seeing trees choked by vines.	1
I think about the wildflower areas that bloom in the spring. I think about the bridge and seeing so many turtles on logs in the water. I think about the different types of vegetation and shaded areas, especially when it is hot outside. I also think about the areas that washed out during heavy rains and how we need to reinforce the trail and rebuild some of those areas. And I think about areas where special care was taken to add plants and rocks that can be enjoyed from the many benches.	1
I love the natural areas that allow me to escape the urban environment even when in the center of the city. The areas of the trail with a minimum of distraction from nature are the very best.	1
I love the lake, the trees, flowers, birds...	1
how beautiful it is in the early morning when I run, the lake, the sky, the trees, the grass, the flowers, the birds, the bugs, the squirrels, the light, the smell, the rowers on the lake, pretty much the whole experience is something I treasure every time I go and miss when I cannot go. If I ever move away, the Trail is what I will miss most.	1

Hmmm . . . this seems like a strange question. The natural qualities of a trail outside? Well, the river it self and how it flows. The plans and trees that can be found along different parts of the trail. The birds and the sounds they make. I like walking the trail at different times of day to see how the light gets refl ected on the water and on the buildings.

Fresh air, trees, clean water. 1

Flora (trees, plants, flowers) and fauna, geology, lake 1

Diverse drought tolerant trees, better water quality, diverse animals that are part of the ecosystem like birds, turtles and fish 1

Birds, native plants. Clean water in the lake. Reptiles and other small wildlife. 1

Beauty, recreational opportunities, environmental connection, people connection 1

Beautiful trees, somewhere where there are actually seasons in Austin 1

Beautiful tree canopy 1

Are there particular places along the Trail where you feel most connected to nature?...

Response	Count
Zilker Botanical Garden and east end of trail along the peninsula. Both have good birding and plant possibilities. Not too crowded.	1
Where the plant life is abundant	1
Where the homeless are not coming up to me	1
Those places where you can look in two different directions, and see two different versions of Austin.	1
There are quite a few places all along	1
The wooded area of the Disc Park east of Pleasant Vally street. Often, deer are wandering about and bird songs are prolific.	1
The trees at Festival Beach make me feel transported to a forest far from the city, the bird activity closer to the West side ease any anxiety or tension that I have built up, watching the turtles makes me feel like a kid again.	1

The part of the trail east of Congress...quieter, more crushed granite instead of concrete, beautiful cypresses.	1
The boardwalk area through Travis heights and the part of the trail that dips away from Cesar Chavez and goes near the boat dock with all the large cypress.	1
The areas closet to the water and where I can sit and contemplate	1
The area near the MoPac bridge and other areas far from streets and traffic and man made distractions.	1
south shore east of mopac and west of Lamar. surrounded by nature, not buildings, not parking lots (mostly), feel immersed and not in a big city except for the skyline which sometimes looks pasted on	1
sitting on the benches	1
Not necessarily.	1
Northwest part of trail between YMCA and Austin High	1
It's not so much a place along the, but how many people/types of people are using the trail. When there's not a ton of people, I feel at peace. I still enjoy myself when the trail is crowded, but it's not as much as a respite from daily life.	1
It feels like a respite away from the city where you can not see any buildings still, and there are certain points where there is a greater connection to the city like the skyline view westbound along the boardwalk.	1
In spring, the open field with the blooming pears and redbuds on the north side of the park between Lamar and MoPac creates an exhilarating feeling of expanse and depth. Whenever you come out of the cool, calm shelter of the overarching trees to an open space, it's a rush of air and sky. Oddly, areas with views of the natural expanse and the city: the peninsula, and on the MoPac ped. bridge looking east. It's a feeling of integration with nature, with the city in the distance.	1
i think it isn't one spot for me, as it is experienced in motion -- resulting in a lovely nature bath. i think that sound is important too, and i like the sound of the decomposed granite.	1
I really enjoy the covered area close to Texas Rowing center. I love the jut outs that have benches where you can sit and enjoy the water.	1
I love the point by Texas Rowing Center, both the butterfly garden and the bench on the point further west. I am often there to catch the sunset and love to see the harmony between the setting sun, traffic on MoPac, tall trees, people rowing, and others running/walking/biking on the trail.	1

I feel most connected where there are no people camping on the trail and where I can enjoy the natural beauty.	1
I believe its near the Heron Creek Restrooms, where there are tall trees, a little area that is surrounded by water with a small bridge but away from the road -- it's quiet, the air is fresh and cooler than elsewhere, it smells clean and feels like a little hideaway from the city and some activity along the trail. A little private space in a public environment.	1
Free springs, particularly the area around sunken garden springs.	1
Festival Beach area - the trees are beautiful, creating a space that feels calm and inviting (and is more quiet, despite being by IH35). And anywhere that has significant lake views.	1
Everywhere, except not so much at Zilker fields, or when the trail reroutes to Cesar Chavez in front of the powerplant, and at the baseball fields. Connecting to nature feels like you are part of something bigger, like your troubles are small, like there is hope in the world, like I am my best self.	1
Definitely the part over by the rowing center where you can see the lake really well and are close to it. Also going across the MoPac bridge and looking out at the water. The part just passed the Congress bridge heading toward the boardwalk is another stretch that comes to mind.	1
Chicano Park / Festival Beach -- native trees, wildflower gardens, views of the water, boat launches, wide green space for picnicking.	1
Benches that view the lake along the trail.	1
Behind the Nature Center, kayaking west towards red bud isle	1
Any place that's not directly adjacent to automobile traffic.	1
Any areas on the south side of the river.	1
All of the trail is the closest you get to nature in the downtown area. The purpose of a trail is to be a trail. It is not a music venue, nor a food truck mall, nor a cultural center. I can remember when the folks who ran Aquafest truly believed that their events were so important that the trail had to be closed off and the lake used for dragboat racing. None of us have anything important enough to block access to this very narrow strip of greenbelt.	1

What excites you, and what concerns you, about linking art and the environment along...

unless it was created by God, it doesn't belong there but other places like museums	1
Too much spending on art and not the environment.	1
The arts have, historically, been co-opted by white people so I would be concerned that that would be the case here.	1
The "art" we get is all just another form of trash that will eventually end up recycled or in the land fill.	1
that music would be piped in and drown out birdsong, quiet.	1
Sustainability, maintenance.	1
See previous comments	1
Removing the outdoor recreation and natural qualities and focusing too much on special event activities that bring large crowds to one spot (rather than engaging those who are walking on the trail to appreciate activities during their journey)	1

provides more opportunities to enjoy the trails. it doesnt need to just be about jogging/walking	1
please don't commercialize the trail. keep it natural	1
more to learn and experience and for others as well. Stories to tell and learn. commercialization; ruining quiet natural areas	1
More opportunity to be outdoors, contrast of natural and man made art, creative natural art with gardens, diverse groups gathering on neutral grounds. But overuse with trash, occasional rude/dangerous people, noise, too many cars, is a worry.	1
Less boredom for users	1
It's more interesting than exciting to me. One concern would be people blocking the Trail while trying to take pictures of the art, as happened from time to time with the Weiwei bikes. I am also concerned that any long term installation wouldn't be maintained so that it would deteriorate over time.	1
I would like to learn more about the natural environment of Central Texas and learn to appreciate nature more.	1
I would be concerned about a cluttered look. Focus on well-maintained, natural looks	1
I was very excited to stumble upon live music one late afternoon in the fall of 2020. As well as one New Year's day when the Mishap Marching band were playing under the Pluger bridge. As previously mentioned, the concern I have is a permanent installation being in a place that would impede traffic.	1
I think linking art with the trail, will enhance the experience for each user.	1
I love art in public places and have always enjoyed the murals and installations along the trail. That being said, I would not wish for it to compromise the health of the river, trees and natural environment. Also I think it needs to be placed in such a way that we do not find people jamming up sections of the trail to stop and look at art.	1
i like the dialogue that stems from public art & i think it can be a great way to frame difficult but important conversations about climate change and environmental justice.	1
I am very concerned that the trail will come to look like Waterloo Park--lovely landscaping and music venues that can't be peacefully walked/run/biked through. The more events are held there, the more pressure there will be for commercial activities. The trail is a very narrow strip of undeveloped land that makes downtown Austin a beautiful place. It should stay that way and expand to connect with similar venues.	1

I am most concerned about loading up the trail with yet more stuff and suggest the city of Austin should allocate more funds to public places for art and culture that do not interfere with the safety and public beauty of the trail. The poor trail is already so heavily used it is showing its wear. We are endangering of soiling a nature treasure by overuse.

I am concerned that art installations will interfere with and destroy Austin's unique natural treasure of natural space in an urban center.

1

Having more exciting things to look at along the trail are exciting. Anything that would create more litter or waste is concerning.

Excites - opportunity for landscape design and architecture that improves surrounding environment in a beautiful way. Concerns - art that clashes with environment or that makes people feel bad/sad/angry.

excited to provide jobs for artists and for kids and communities to be exposed to new things

1

Excited to have more thought about art in this public space.

1

Crowds of people stopping on the trail is a big concern.

Concern: artist selection criteria. Would love to see extremely inclusive selections of artists and art styles

1

Art not being tasteful or vetted by local art critics. Items just looking like they are dropped there as if the trail nature and the people watching is not enough. Clogging the space so it is not an escape from the city but an extension of the busy-ness of the city.

Again I am excited to have more reasons to visit the trail and bring visitors to the trail. I am concerned about vandalism or people failing to appreciate the reason for the art installations. I feel that Fortlandi wasn't respected by many trail users, but I think the music events are, so it's important to find the right balance

1. Arts and culture activities and projects are inconsistent with the natural character of the Trail. 2. Arts and culture activities and projects are inconsistent with the natural character of the Trail. 3, Arts and culture activities and projects are inconsistent with the natural character of the Trail.

1	Some challenges when it is dark with tents	4/13/2022 6:19 PM
2	Feel that the river is overwhelmed with people to the detriment of the wildlife.	4/13/2022 12:26 PM
3	Everyone is happy there	4/10/2022 12:13 AM
4	However, I have gone down there less due to homeless folks presence so close to part of the trail.	4/7/2022 6:46 PM
5	Homeless people & trash everywhere on/near trail and in lake	4/6/2022 5:14 PM
6	The last two times I tried to get a drink of water on the trail, the water fountains were either broken or turned off.	4/6/2022 4:38 PM
7	Natural and not overly commercial	3/29/2022 1:52 PM
8	I've been stalked by strange men.	3/26/2022 5:11 PM
9	Noisy - loud music People not allow others to pass/walk by easily on walkways, trails, etc.	3/26/2022 12:53 PM
10	Access is spread out around trail so not congested, common culture of relaxation among visitors, quality trail with excellent upkeep.	3/25/2022 7:02 AM

3	Sitting upon a bench on the trail several years ago , a young man biked up and said he was sick & could he almost say down for a minute . As he began to feel better we began to chat ,and come to find out he was an English teacher in Seoul Korea.....Our best friends years earlier in post doc were Korean and we had lost touch with them. I asked to reach out to our friends so we could contact them.....Our friends contacted us! This was all due to this young man the Connections the trail offers us.	4/12/2022 12:04 PM
4	I love the downtown vibe and the water with all the activities	4/12/2022 10:32 AM
5	There was this couple I used to seek out every time I'd walk around the lake. I'd bring a few handfuls of bird feed and when the goose saw me, he'd come out of the water to greet me on the trail. I'd hand him the feed and he'd promptly swim it back to the water to feed it to his beautiful mate, a magnificent white swan. They were always swimming together and it brought joy, peace and zen to my heart to be a part of this beauty.	4/10/2022 12:13 AM

3	Audio - sounds of past and present would be cool.	4/14/2022 7:45 PM
4	Separating cycling and walkers/runners so one is calm enough to enjoy tranquility and be able to engage with art and culture	4/13/2022 6:19 PM
5	Quiet to hear the water flowing and the birds, darkness to see the sky at night	4/13/2022 12:26 PM
6	Birding with a lectures and a leader. dog training classes. photography classes	4/12/2022 12:04 PM
7	Bird watching	4/10/2022 12:13 AM
8	Great question. Honestly, the idea of this is so new to me, I don't know how to respond because I don't know what I don't know. It might be helpful to mention what other communities do so there's something to respond to	4/7/2022 8:45 PM
9	None	4/7/2022 6:46 PM
10	Leave it natural/ don't ruin it!	3/29/2022 1:52 PM
11	Conservation/experiences related to helping the plants and animals of the trail	3/26/2022 11:19 PM
12	Nature tours, with birdwatching, information about plants, water life.	3/26/2022 5:11 PM
13	Music pop ups.	3/25/2022 6:02 PM
14	More casual live music on the trail. Having musicians present without it being a big production. Or even having multiple musicians performing at different spots on the trail. Also having community theater at the shores would be fun	3/23/2022 9:14 PM
15	Pet parades, well organized talent shows as well as Well organized sports (i.e, Pickle ball, volleyball, badminton)for children & adults, organized in different level of performance teams. Lessons & Demonstrations of dog/pet training lessons. Give the enlightened downtown residents choices to partake outdoors. Music offered should be be soothing & relaxing. Dancing lessons can offer opportunities for children & parents of freely express themselves, listening through lively, less sedate music. etc. etc. etc.	3/18/2022 5:32 PM
16	I WOULD be interested In Many activities but would depend on ease of getting to area such as traffic and parking	3/9/2022 6:43 AM
17	N/A	2/24/2022 7:40 PM
18	Sensory experiences such as herb walls, areas with fragrant blooms, etc. This can be beautiful, interesting landscape design that also helps with some of the musty, stagnant water and air smell that is common downtown.	2/24/2022 11:38 AM

Q14 How would you see arts and culture activities improving your use and enjoyment of the Trail?

1	Might use more often if there are cool events that happen regularly.	4/14/2022 7:45 PM
2	Aesthetically pleasing	4/13/2022 6:19 PM
3	If it creates habitat and meditative zones, I would enjoy it more.	4/13/2022 12:26 PM
4	Music, more benches , more milage markers, more bathroom facilites	4/12/2022 12:04 PM
5	Historic info along trail would enhance experience	4/10/2022 12:13 AM
6	It could be part of place-making and memory-making	4/7/2022 8:45 PM
7	I do not see it doing that. I enjoy the nature.	4/7/2022 6:46 PM
8	I don't think they will. This is a "trail", not a "park". Put the group activities in other parks or adjacent open space. Don't block the trail.	4/6/2022 4:38 PM
9	It would inspire	4/1/2022 4:31 PM
10	Keeps it interesting, learning opportunities.	3/30/2022 5:24 PM
11	Not at all!	3/29/2022 1:52 PM
12	I do not see those activities as improving my enjoyment at all	3/29/2022 3:47 AM
13	Meeting new people, discovering local artists	3/26/2022 11:19 PM
14	I'd come more often.	3/26/2022 5:11 PM
15	Att is ok. More festivals and structured group activities is not ok. The trail is already crowded with walkers, joggers and cyclists.	3/26/2022 11:45 AM
16	Increased visits	3/25/2022 6:02 PM
17	Would be nice to have some meaningful installations, not too many, in spaces that do not take away from natural beauty of space.	3/25/2022 7:02 AM
18	Austin has always been a weird, messy city of music and colors and art. The trail should be just as vibrant.	3/23/2022 9:14 PM
19	As long as it stayed organic and not built environment, I think it would pull people back into the moment and appreciate the uniqueness of our community and this space	3/19/2022 4:11 PM
20	Provide opportunities for people to verbally connect & interact with one another. Prevent loneliness of depression.	3/18/2022 5:32 PM
21	I would visit the trail much more often	3/12/2022 9:35 PM
22	Mostly I use trail for exercising with friends so art not an important part on the trail and, I would think, we could find a better use of resources	3/9/2022 6:43 AM

Q15 How would you see arts and culture activities connecting people better to the Trail?

Answered: 21 Skipped: 25

#	RESPONSES	DATE
1	They'd engage people more	5/14/2022 12:26 PM
2	Interactive activities	5/14/2022 11:37 AM
3	Interactive art or even civic dialogue in spaces along the trail. It's public right of way that can be used for lots of things in addition to hiking/ biking.	4/14/2022 7:45 PM
4	Possible discussions	4/13/2022 6:19 PM
5	Opportunity to help restore the riparian landscape, environmental education activities such as "listening" to trees (this is done using a stethoscope), underwater tunnel for viewing aquatic wildlife, water tubes that create soft water sounds such as the one in San Francisco Bay, sculptures that pay tribute to the missing wildlife that was once there in an effort to bring it back, more bat habitat- maybe with one way glass for viewing.	4/13/2022 12:26 PM
6	People talk to each other more at these events	4/12/2022 12:04 PM
7	Info about importance of preserving habitat for native species and descriptions of trees, wildlife and other natural gems to cherish	4/10/2022 12:13 AM
8	It could be a powerful way to make people feel welcome, included, and seen	4/7/2022 8:45 PM
9	It will draw more people.	4/7/2022 6:46 PM
10	I think people come to the trail to walk, jog, run and/or ride bikes, or just sit somewhere and enjoy the view. I don't think you need to provide entertainment, at least not on the trail.	4/6/2022 4:38 PM
11	Curiosity and learning would be a great way to engage people.	3/30/2022 5:24 PM
12	Why?	3/29/2022 1:52 PM
13	Just getting back to nature is the most important & beautiful thing about the trail. Arts & culture activities don't seem compatible with just enjoying nature. The trail is already crowded so i would not like to see more groups on the trail	3/29/2022 3:47 AM
14	I think the more people are involved in these activities, the more they will appreciate the trail and take care of it	3/28/2022 7:34 PM
15	Bringing people together through installations and events	3/26/2022 11:19 PM
16	Are you kidding? This is Austin!	3/26/2022 5:11 PM
17	New people may attend	3/25/2022 6:02 PM
18	Depends on maintenance or upkeep, imagine things could get vandalized and such. The enormous bicycle exhibit was incredible, wish it had been purchased as a permanent exhibit.	3/25/2022 7:02 AM
19	People will always build new memories with the trail. We just need to provide the right situations	3/23/2022 9:14 PM
20	Coordinate with the library, suggest that the community read the same books on different subjects, maybe history or nature related. Have the attendants discuss it together. Strive to educate in geigraphy, languages. etc.	3/18/2022 5:32 PM
21	More social situations and a community appreciation of art would bring more people together	3/12/2022 9:35 PM

1	Raise awareness of people's stories and neighborhood / key landmark history. It's a linear trail - could be cool to have an artistic timeline? Promote local/ small business/ artists in the creation and installation of any new art.	4/14/2022 7:45 PM
2	Not sure it would, other than being lovely	4/13/2022 6:19 PM
3	Learning about the river gives one a vital sense of connection to place. I believe we feel a particular poverty of soul as we are so disconnected.	4/13/2022 12:26 PM

12	These activities will bring people together with the communities that surround the trail. The trail it's not an island, it's surrounded by neighborhoods of people that chose to live there because of the lake and the trail	3/28/2022 7:34 PM
13	Improved care of the trail	3/25/2022 6:02 PM

4	It may bring even more people and further damage the habitat. If the art works increased habitat, then I would like this. Not a fan of having concerts there (even though I love music) as it distracts from just being at the river - unless the music created uses the sounds that are already there.	4/13/2022 12:26 PM
5	no	4/12/2022 12:04 PM
6	Not really	4/12/2022 10:32 AM
7	Vandalism. The Vision Zero mural at Odom Pavillion was recently covered w graffiti and I just stood there and cried. Why would anyone do this. Unless we have cameras or police /24/7, not sure we can maintain the beauty	4/10/2022 12:13 AM
8	As long as walker and runners won't be crowded off the trail.	4/7/2022 9:10 PM
9	Not really, but traffic flow can be an issue so there are things to mitigate a bit	4/7/2022 8:45 PM
10	Only that I hate to see "people art" take away from nature's art and trash/erosion from crowds.	4/7/2022 6:46 PM
11	Yes. I want the trail to stay natural as possible. Not too many events please!	4/7/2022 6:20 PM

16	Please leave the trail alone. Stop adding anything to the trail besides trees/nature	3/29/2022 9:17 AM
17	Yes, anything that would bring gatherings or groups to the trail would be very detrimental to our enjoyment of the trail's natural beauty. So called "arts & culture" activities undoubtedly means MUCH more bars & alcohol usage on the trail	3/29/2022 3:47 AM

21	Crowds, creating eyesores because of lack of care, maintenance, deterioration	3/26/2022 12:53 PM
22	No	3/25/2022 6:02 PM
23	I think it is easy to increase the scope and cost of activities in order to achieve a larger per-activity impact, where having more frequent casual activities could have a larger impact overall. Think having a small concert with professional sound and vendors vs. a series of casual acoustic sets. Or a large art installation from an experience developer vs a series of murals and sculptures from small local artists.	3/23/2022 9:14 PM
24	Maintenance issues of public installations, sound problems, traffic from events	3/19/2022 4:11 PM offered to all. Do not separate people into groups, emphasis should be improving wuality of life for all. No color, ethivity, level of education. AVOID grouping people. Treat them ss equal members of the human race.

26	Parking is already very limited and not free making it less accessible for those who can't afford it, plus the trash and bags of dog poop are super unappealing and may increase with more events.	3/12/2022 9:35 PM
27	Already trail is very crowded and a lot of erosion is occurring. Bringing more traffic does not seem like a good idea	3/9/2022 6:43 AM
28	Regular removal of the shocking amount of litter in the waterline around the trail should be a higher priority than arts programs. The natural beauty of the trail should be the #1 priority.	3/9/2022 5:20 AM
29	My one concern is drawing crowds to areas that are supposed to be through ways for people who are trying to exercise and be active. I would hope that events would not cluster directly on the trail.	2/24/2022 11:38 AM

1	Are there ways to partner with the Long Center to pull performances out into the trails nearby - for example Long Center Live where you could sit out along the waterfront and see a big screening of the performance art happening in the building (they do this in Miami I think).	4/14/2022 7:45 PM
2	Communities along the trail are diverse, varied economically, culturally, and practice varied traditions, which one would think is a good thing. Not sure where you are going with this.	4/13/2022 6:19 PM
