

Seaholm

The Seaholm Intake facility was formerly the pump house for the Seaholm Power Plant, which operated until 1989. In 1996, Austin City Council approved its decommissioning, paving the way for future adaptive reuse.

The City of Austin Parks and Recreation Department completed Phase I of the project in 2022, ensuring the building's safety for the first time since decommissioning. The Trail Conservancy is currently fundraising for Phase II of the project, which would bring the building to life as a community space for everyone.
